The Connecticut Poetry Circuit was established in 1968 to continue the work of the New England Poetry Circuit, which was founded in 1964 by the Academy of American Poets and Holly Stevens, daughter of the acclaimed poet and Hartford insurance executive Wallace Stevens. The work of the Circuit is guided by a panel of poets: Dick Allen, Randall Horton, Vivian Shipley, Clare Rossini and Kate Rushin. The Circuit is directed by James Gentile who is an English Professor at Manchester Community College, the Circuit's permanent home.

The panel also judges a state-wide contest of college students poets. Five student poets are selected each year and tour in the spring.
