JADE CHANG

The Wangs vs. The World at Yale

JADE CHANG'S debut novel, The Wangs vs. the World, was published by Houghton Mifflin Harcourt in October. It has been named a New York Times Editors' Choice and is one of Buzzfeed's 24 Best Books of 2016. The Wangs will be published in 12 countries and NPR said this:

"Her book is unrelentingly fun, but it is also raw and profane – a story of fierce pride, fierce anger, and even fiercer love."

She has worked as an arts and culture journalist and editor for publications like the BBC, Metropolis, Glamour, and The Los Angeles Times Magazine. She was recently an editor at Goodreads. Her first paying job after college was as a researcher for the J. Peterman catalog. (Yes, where Elaine worked on Seinfeld – it's real!)

Jade is the recipient of a Sundance Arts Journalist fellowship, the AIGA/Winterhouse Design Criticism Award, and a Squaw Valley Writers Workshop scholarship. She lives in Los Angeles.
